Ingolds Build English Home

P. O. Guy, Builder Photo by Keller Studio

This charming English type home located at the corner of Acacia and Eldorado avenues, was recently built for Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Ingold by P. O. Guy.

It has an attractive exterior, enhanced by the charm of the design of the tall fireplace chimney that extends above the roof. There is a double garage.

Inside are a spacious living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, service porch, two bedrooms and bath.

Cove ceilings are found throughout the house, and built-in gas heaters, which are daily gaining favor in the newer built houses.

In the living room is a modified version of the old English fireplace, modernized by a tile hearth and tile flanges extending within the fireplace proper. The tile is in wood tones of light tan with a rich brown trim. On each side of the fireplace at the bottom are square grills for the cold air intake, and just above the opening are two grills to release the hot air into the room. This modernized version not only provides adequate ventilation, but conserves a great deal of the heat which would otherwise escape.

A recessed arch, with indirect lighting system at the base, was built into the upper part of the fireplace to set off a picture.

At one end of the long living room is a large window that is divided into three sections. The middle section is stationary, while the outer ones may be opened for ventilation.

The dining room and kitchen are directly back of the living room. At one end of the dining room are a series of long French windows, with a door opening to the lawn in back. Light fixtures in both these rooms conform with the English theme throughout the house.

Yellow, in shades blending from the pale yellow walls and cupboards, with a slightly deeper trim, to the deeper yellow mottled tile of the drain, is the color theme in the kitchen. Black tile was used around the double sink and for other places in trimming.

Twelve cupboard doors disclose storage space, including upper and lower sections of a large cooler, and as many or more drawers, two of which are lined.

Between the dough board and the bread board is a tiny sliding board of hard wood, built to hold the meat grinder.

Another unusual feature is the type of garbage removal. A small trap door, just to the right of the sink and set in like the cupboard doors, opens down, and reveals the garbage chute. It is conveyed by an aluminum scoop, which is easily removed for cleaning.

Between the arched way to the breakfast nook, and the door to the service porch, is the space for an electric ice box with the special service plug below.

The breakfast nook is finished with walls and woodwork of "pale yellow." A built-in milk receiver is placed beneath one of the three windows. In one corner is a small corner cupboard.

On the service porch are the laundry trays, storage tank and a large broom closet. Removable windows in the door, and above the broom closet will provide ventilation in the summer.

On the other side of the house are the two bedrooms, bath and hall, which leads off the living room. In the hall is a spacious linen closet, with four wide, deep drawers, and two doors opening to a deep storage space above.

The front bedroom is finished in orchid and green. Palest orchid was used in mottling the walls, with a deeper orchid woodwork. Delicate green was used in stenciled decorations about the room. A large window faces the front, and is a duplicate of the one in the living room.

In the back bedroom, pale green mottled walls prevail, with a deeper green woodwork. Pink pansy stenciled design centers each of the four walls. The ironing board and iron container has been built in this room. There is also a large closet with a built-in chest of drawers.

The bath is extremely attractive and unusual in finish. Travertine finish to imitate old stone was used for walls and ceiling, with octagon yellow and black tiles for the floor. There is a dainty built-in vanity with Venetian mirror above.

The shower closet has an arched opening.
